Georgia and Florida come together in local author, Lynda Fitzgerald

IF TRUTH BE TOLD, a novel by Snellville resident, Lynda Fitzgerald, is due to be released by Five Star Expressions in June 2007. The author is a native Floridian, but she has lived in the metro Atlanta area for almost forty years. "I love Georgia. It has hills and spring and autumn, but I have to admit Florida still tugs at my heart." Her writing reflects her love of both.

Lynda was awarded a creative writing scholarship from DeKalb College (now Georgia Perimeter College), where her short story, "And We'll Call Him Jeff," was published in the DeKalb Literary Arts Journal; and she has taken a number of creative writing courses through GPC and Emory University. She is a member of Mystery Writers of America and the Atlanta Writers Club and is currently working on her next book, the first of a mystery series set in Cape Canaveral, Florida.

Five Star Expressions is an imprint of Thomson-Gale.
